Mental Health Diversion Court
Participant Handbook

Honorable David E. Cook
and
Honorable Deborah Nekhom

Introduction

This handbook has been designed for your personal use. It is meant to answer any questions you might have and provide information about what is expected of you as a participant in the program. The foundation of the Mental Health Diversion Court is based on three essential values: Dignity and respect for self and others; Personal Responsibility; and Honesty. The mission of the Tarrant County Mental Health Diversion Court program is to identify mentally impaired offenders, to expedite them through the criminal justice system, and to help them achieve mental stability and non-criminal behavior.

Program Structure

As a participant, you will be expected to comply with directives from your Case Manager, comply with the tasks identified on your individualized treatment plan, and follow the instructions given in the Mental Health Diversion Court. An individualized treatment plan will be created by the Clinical Case Manager during your initial evaluation and will include different goals and objectives that you will be required to complete during treatment. Your treatment plan may change during the program in order to address your needs and provide resources as needed. Some examples of objectives identified on the treatment plan may include: 1) The Client will take all mental health medications as prescribed by their psychiatrist. 2) The client will attend at least 6 individual counseling at MHMR or with an MHDC contracted vendor. 3) The client will maintain sobriety from all mind-altering substances and submit negative drug tests throughout the duration of the program.

Your Case Manager will monitor your progress while in the program and you will be required to attend office visits monthly. You will be required to attend court two times per month while you are in Phase One and one time per month while in Phases Two and Three. During court sessions, you will meet with the presiding Judge of the program to discuss your progress toward your treatment goals and the program requirements.

Program Duration

The Mental Health Diversion Court program is completed on average between nine months and two years. The terms of the program will be determined by your needs and your progress throughout treatment. You will be required to enter a guilty plea to be admitted into the program. Once you complete the program successfully, your case(s) will be dismissed and will be eligible for an immediate expunction. If you do not complete the program successfully, your case(s) will be remanded to the court of origin.

Program Agreement

- Admit to the commission of the offense and agree that this admission may be used against you in court as provided by law.
